VOL.01

Environmental destruction is a grave issue today, in every region of our planet.

Our animal friends, who live in harmony with Nature, are very, very concerned.

"We'll never survive if things don't change!"

"True! We must do something!"

As their worries grew bigger by the day, their voices became louder and louder.

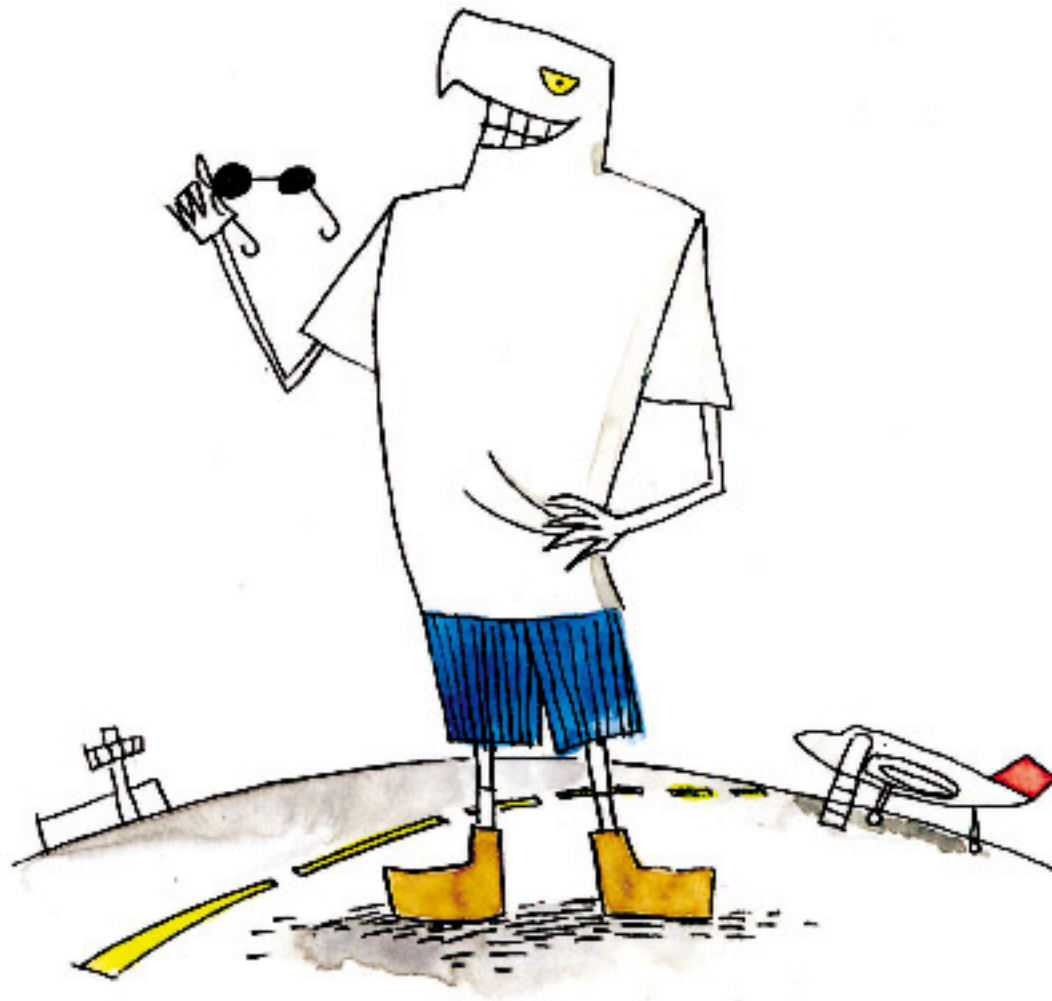

"We mustn't rely on humans any longer!"

Finally, Harri Porcupine, from Germany, decides to host an environmental conference for animals, calling on representatives from all over the world.

And so today, animals from various countries around the globe are arriving, one by one, at this forest in Germany.

First to arrive is Max Eagle from the United States of America.

Max, who was chosen to represent his country for his loud voice and tough attitude, loves to be speedy. He chartered a jet for this occasion, just like the President would.

Max is from the U.S.A. -- the land of mass consumption and disposable goods.

Hmmm... Something about his manners tells us he might cause some waves in today's conference...

Next comes Bodhi Riger, who left his home in India months ago. He made his way to Germany on foot, with only a small cooking pot on his back, sleeping under the stars at night. Bodhi, who has gone through a lifetime of yoga training, prefers simplicity in everything.

He believes in Nature's way, and follows it... quite strictly.

From Japan comes Tac Badger. He is thrilled to be on an airplane for the first time and excited about attending his first international conference. Carefully, he slides his mobile phone into the cloth sack on his lap.

What do you think he has inside this big sack?

Coming by ship and by plane from Brazil is Jacare Crocodile. Jacare is still panting from his hurried journey, but the moment he sees Tac, he gives him a terribly cold look.

Is he angry with Tac for some reason? Do you sense trouble ahead?

Next. Dr. Rabbit comes hopping along. From England, he crossed the Strait of Dover by the Chunnel train and arrived at a station near the forest.

Dr. Rabbit plops himself down on the grass, looking as though he had hopped all the way from his homeland.

He carefully clutches his laptop computer. What does he plan to do with it?

Last to arrive is Mama Elle Elephant. Mama Elle, who travelled from Kenya by ship and trailer truck, came with a giant supply of bananas on her back.

The others watch in amazement as she approaches, shaking the ground, all the while grabbing bananas from her back and placing them into her mouth using her long trunk.
